SECTION B: 50 MARKS

Questions 51 to 55 carry ten marks each

51.. Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

My name is Aber Pamela, a P.7 candidate this year. At dawn yesterday, my alarm on my digital watch buzzed and only to check it was 5:00a.m. It was time to wake up to prepare for the day. To my surprise, the rest of my classmates were still asleep. Up! Up girls! Said matron Carolina but not any child responded for they were still enjoying their warm beds. After giving up on them, she insisted that I woke up adding that I was very slow so I needed to ready myself for class.

At once I got my bathroom items unfortunately my towel which I had washed the previous evening was still wet. I moved with my bucket to the tap in the washroom. I felt chilly. Nevertheless, I had to bathe the cold tap water. No sooner had I left the bathroom than the nimbus clouds “concluded their meeting” what began as light showers grew into a heavy down pour. At that time, I was fully dressed and ready for class but I had left my raincoat in the classroom.

SECTION B: 50 MARKS

Questions 51 to 55 carry ten marks each

51. Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

My name is Aber Pamela, a P.7 candidate this year. At dawn yesterday, my alarm on my digital watch buzzed and only to check it was 5:00a.m. It was time to wake up to prepare for the day. To my surprise, the rest of my classmates were still asleep. Up! Up girls! Said matron Carolina but not any child responded for they were still enjoying their warm beds. After giving up on them, she insisted that I woke up adding that I was very slow so I needed to ready myself for class.

At once I got my bathroom items unfortunately my towel which I had washed the previous evening was still wet. I moved with my bucket to the tap in the washroom. I felt chilly. Nevertheless, I had to bathe the cold tap water. No sooner had I left the bathroom than the nimbus clouds “concluded their meeting” what began as light showers grew into a heavy down pour. At that time, I was fully dressed and ready for class but I had left my raincoat in the classroom.

I realized I would be in hot soup if I moved in the rain. Seeing pupils walk in the rain without a rain coat is what Ms. Tendo Judith, the teacher on duty detested most. I stubbornly weaved through the flooded path to the classroom though there was a power blackout and not even a single teacher was available to teach us. It was indeed unusual.

Later, my friends joined me in class after the heavy rain. The bell rang for breakfast and moved to the dining hall. Reaching the hall, there wasn't even any sign of breakfast! Cups and plates lay empty at the tables. I grew hungrier and hungrier.

We were then ordered to return to class. We found a lot of work on the board which we wrote hungrily. At lunch time, we again moved to the dining hall but still there was not any sign of food for lunch. I could not hide my disappointment. Immediately I started to complain loudly about the hunger, the real alarm clock buzzed. I woke up breathing angrily only to realize it had been just a dream. What a terrible sleep I had!

Samson: It is on the noticeboard but I also have a copy in my bag.

Madinah: Do not worry, Juma. We are going to have a briefing today after lunch.

Samson: What do you think the teachers will talk about?

Juma: My elder sister told me that they will guide us on how to follow instructions and how to write our index numbers.

Madinah: That's good. I think they will also tell us the time allowed or the paper.

Juma: You are right. Let's go and revise our notes. I hope the teachers have set easy questions.

Samson: I also pray so, because I really want to achieve my target.

Madinah: In deed, as candidates, we need to work very hard or else we won't achieve our targets.

Juma: Let's go and revise.
